ROSE UNIACKE

The acclaimed interior designer tracks down all kinds of alluring antiques to fill her clients' homes, including the Beckhams' house in Holland Park.

Her stand at PAD will feature an assortment of such treasures, including a late 1950s chair by Frits Henningsen (left), a monochrome bowl by the Turkish ceramic artist Alev Ebuzziya Siesbye and two Bernard Leach stoneware tiles decorated with horses and sea creatures.

KAREN SWAMI

Clay is the material of choice for the French ceramicist, who is one of only a handful of people in France to master Kintsugi, the Japanese technique of mending fissures and cracks in pottery with pure gold. She initially studied the practice out of necessity. 'My firing method is so violent it breaks 30 per cent of my pots in the kiln,' she explains. 'This way, I am giving them a second life.' www.swami.fr

H EL ENE BAILLY

For her PAD debut, the gallerist H el ene Bailly will show a selection of 20th-century pieces including a 1924 bronze figure by Gustave Miklos and a painting by the American artist Sam Francis. Born into one of France's most prestigious art-dealing families, Bailly opened her first gallery in Paris in 2007. She has a breathtaking collection of works on display, including masterpieces by Braque (below), Calder, Chagall, Picasso, Renoir and Monet. www.helenebailly.com

VALERY DEMURE

The founding owner of an e-commerce platform for rare jewellery is dedicating her stand to female designers. 'I am more attracted to pieces made by women,' Demure says. 'It's not just about creating sexy or pretty things, but originality and artistic values.' www.valerydemure.com.

PAD London is at Berkeley Square from 1 until 7 October.
