INTRODUCING Micaela Sharp

Based in London and soon to open an office in Malaga, Micaela (above) is making a name for herself across the design industry. She opened her upholstery studio, Micaela Sharp Design, in 2017 and, in 2020, added an interiors arm, describing her style as 'traditional with a focus on craftsmanship, sustainability and layering'. This year, Micaela teamed up with the textile designer Charlotte Beevor to create Studio Janettie, through which the pair sell fabric and homeware in playful colours and patterns. Micaela was also part of the design team for the new Soho House location, Brixton Studio, SW9, and this month, she launches an upholstery course with Create Academy. michelasharpdesign.com | studiojanettie.com | createacademy.com

Show stoppers

Returning to Berkeley Square, W1, after two years due to the pandemic, PAD London is one of the most exciting places to see contemporary and 20th-century art and design. On October 10-16, the fair will showcase pieces from over 60 dealers, galleries, artists and designers. Highlights include a sculpture by Swedish ceramicist Alvina Jakobsson of Modernist, and Pierre Renart's 'Möbius' console in dark wood (left), as well as interiors by the designers Francis Sultana and Rose Uniacke. Tickets cost £25. paddesignart.com

A DECORATOR'S DOZEN

It is not every day that paint powerhouse Farrow & Ball introduces new colours to its impressive collection (the last time was 2018), so when it launches 11, it is worth taking note. The new range has been cleverly devised so that any combination of the paints - all with typically inventive names, such as flame red 'Bamboozle' (pictured above) - works well. 'We wanted the new colours to provide comfort, refreshment and excitement,' says Farrow & Ball's head of creative Charlotte Cosby. The colours are available in Farrow & Ball's interior and exterior finishes; from £52 for 2.5 litres estate emulsion. farrow-ball.com □

DIARY DATES

The Decorative Antiques and Textiles Fair

OCTOBER 4-9

Held in Battersea Park, SW11, this is a one-stop shop for antique and vintage pieces. Over 150 dealers, including Andrew Muir, who specialises in ceramics (above), will sell items from the 1700s to the Seventies. Tickets are £20 on October 4 and £10 thereafter, with free entry daily from 4pm. decorativefair.com

Decorex

OCTOBER 9-12

Returning to Olympia London, W14, it will showcase over 185 brands including Vincent Sheppard, whose 'Titus' lounge chair is seen here. This year, architecture and interior design studio De Rosee Sa have been tasked with creating the VIP lounge. Trade tickets cost £21.60; non-trade £43.20. decorex.com
