Art-lovers headed to May fair to bid on PAD London's most original modern creations

Edited by TERESA FITZHERBERT

Exhibitors from across the world descended on Berkeley Square for PAD London, the international art and design fair, now in its 11th year. Bazaar joined Jeremy Irons, Erdem Moralioglu and Kristin Scott Thomas at the collectors' private view, where art aficionados flocked to make the first bids. Among the many treasures snapped up on the night were two pieces by Alexander Calder, which together sold for over £1m, and an £11,400 pair of Anish Kapoor earrings from the Louisa Guinness Gallery.
